After forty years of trial, Perry Davis' Pain Killer stands unrivaled. It is safe! It acts immediately! It never fails!

Editor of the St. John (N. B.) News, says: It is a sure remedy, active, potent, reliable, and in the most effectual remedy we know of. No family should be without a bottle of it for a single hour.

From the Cincinnati Dispatch: We have seen its magic effects, and know it to be a good article.

From Jas. S. Potter, U. S. Consul at Crefeld, Rhenish Prussia: After long years of use, I am satisfied it is to all over efficient as a healing remedy for scalds, bruises, and sprains.

W. W. Sharper, Valdosta, Ga., says: It is a balsam for all bruises and burns.

From R. W. Adams, Enco, Mo.: It gave me immediate relief.

R. Lewis says: In forty years' use it never has failed me.

W. W. Linn, Hicksville, N. Y., says: I use your PAIN KILLER frequently. It relieves pain and soreness, and heals wounds like magic.

J. W. Dee says: For scalds and burns it has no equal.

PERRY DAVIS' PAIN KILLER is not a new untried remedy. For forty years it has been in constant use; and those who have used it the longest are its best friends.

Its success is solely because of its merit. Since the Pain Killer was first introduced, hundreds of new medicines have come and gone, while to-day this medicine is more extensively used and more highly valued than ever before. Not every family should have a bottle ready for use. Much pain and heavy doctors' bills can often be saved by prompt application of the Pain Killer. Taken most internally, it is perfect safety even in the hands of a child. Try it once thoroughly, and it will prove its value. Your druggist has it at 25c. and $1.00 per bottle.

WHAT THE BURDOCK WAS GOOD FOR.

"Good for nothing," the farmer said,
As he made a sweep at the burdock's head;
But then, he thought it was best, no doubt,
To come some day and root it out.
So he lowered his scythe, and went his way,
To see his corn, to gather his hay;
And the weed grew safe and strong and tall,
Close by the side of the garden wall.

"Good for a home," cried the little toad,
As he hopped up out of the dusty road
He had just been having a dreadful fright,
The boy who gave it was yet in sight.
Here it was cool and dark and green,
The safest kind of a leafy screen.
The toad was happy; "For," said he,
The burdock was plainly meant for me."

"Good for a prop," the spider thought,
And to and fro with care he wrought,
Till he fastened it well to an evergreen,
And spun his cables fine between.
'Twas a beautiful bridge—a triumph of skill;
The flies came 'round as idlers will;
The spider lurked in his corner dim,
The more that came, the better for him.

"Good for play," said a child, perplext
To know what frolic was coming next.
So she gathered the burrs that all despised,
And her city playmate was quite surprised
To see what a beautiful basket or chair
Could be made, with a little time and care,
They ranged their treasures about with pride,
And pla, ed all day by the burdock's side.

Nothing is lost in this world of ours;
Honey comes from the idle flowers;
The weed which we pass in utter scorn
May save a life by another morn.
Wonders await us at every turn.
We must be silent, and gladly learn.
No room for recklessness or abuse,
Since even a burdock has its use.

SELECT STORY.

DOUBTFUL ACQUAINTANCES.

A SEASIDE STORY.

"It is very remarkable," said my uncle, as Mr. Gregory left the room.

"It is very mysterious," said Lily, with strong emphasis on the adverb.

"To me," observed an elderly lady boarder, "it appears to be something worse than mysterious; and, without making any assertions, I would at least caution you, my dear, against any closer intimacy with one who seems so often to be possessed of information in a manner of which there is no conceivable natural explanation."

"It reminds me most," said the Rev. Mr. Briggs, "of certain cases, undoubtedly well authenticated, in which the existence of the so-called 'second sight' has been demonstrated in a very singular manner."

"And," added my uncle, "although many of the professors of Spiritualism have been proved impostors, it by no means follows that all—"

"Yes, yes," broke in our lady friend, "but we all know that people once had dealings with familiar spirits, and I never could find any proof that this kind of thing has ever ceased, and, therefore, as I said before, I very strongly caution you—"

"Hush!" cried several voices. "Here he comes."

My uncle, my cousin Lily and I were staying at a boarding house at the seaside, and among a somewhat numerous company was a certain Mr. Gregory. We had made his acquaintance on the night of our arrival in a rather comical manner. He was passing our room just as Lily was calling to me in a tone of woeful despair that she had broken the key in the lock and could not get out. Through the key hole he had volunteered his services as an amateur lock picker, and released us from our imprisonment.

This introduction had served quite as well as a much more formal one would have done to inaugurate what promised to be a pleasant seaside acquaintance. Now, on first sight, he certainly presented very little appearance of being a suspicious or dangerous character. He was a young man of some 25 years of age, with a bright, frank expression, and a gleam of mischief in his eyes. He was exceedingly intelligent and well informed, and though rather retiring in the mixed company of our establishment, could, we discovered, sing well, read well and talk well. Without intruding himself upon us, he had made himself very agreeable to us two girls; and we had surmised that he was a young professional man suffering from over-work, who had come down to recruit his health. But we are often warned against judging from appearances, and had during the past few days manifested a very remarkable power of clairvoyance or second sight, or whatever else you like to call it, which had created a great sensation among us.

On the previous day, for instance, my uncle had met a gentleman at the station, and had brought him home to dinner. We saw them walking slowly up the garden together in conversation, and Lily had exclaimed:

"Who on earth is this?"

Mr. Gregory looked and said:

"His name is Smith, and he is returning to town by the midnight train."

"You know him?" I said.

"Never saw him in my life before," was the answer.

Sure enough, his name proved to be Smith, and he returned to town that night after a long private interview with my uncle; nor had he, as he told us in answer to our inquiries, ever seen or heard of Mr. Gregory before.

On Saturday morning alo the Rev. Mr. Briggs, taking a walk on the beach, meditating on his Sunday text, had encountered Mr. Gregory, who volunteered information as to the said text, with chapter and verse all correct, to the petrifaction of the reverend gentleman.

On another occasion, when our elderly lady friend mentioned that she had been out making a small purchase, Mr. Gregory informed us sotto voce that a bottle of hair-wash constituted the purchase in question. This communication was very unfortunately overheard. Its correctness was not at the time definitely established, but it was shortly after this that she first propounded her own particular theory on the subject, which she put forward with renewed confidence in the conversation given above, after a fresh display of the unholy phenomenon, as she called it. This was the occasion thereof Mr. Briggs had been seen coming up the walk in great glee with a parcel under his arm.

"What has he got there?" said some one.

"All the works of Josephus for tenpence," replied Mr. Gregory.

Immediately afterward Mr. Briggs entered the room and said to the company:

"What do you think I have just bought?" to which the general response was:

"All Josephus for tenpence."

It turned out that he had just ferreted it out from a second-hand bookstall.

When questioned about his mysterious powers, Mr. Gregory always became very serious, and gave no information, but changed the subject as soon as possible.

In consequence of all this, interest, curiosity, uneasiness, and even alarm, were in varying degrees excited in the breasts of the several members of our company. Most of the ladies declared that they were daily expecting something serious to happen. That those expectations were not altogether unfulfilled will no be made plain.

There were two new arrivals on the day on which our story opens. Our company had hitherto been pleasant and select, but the lady and gentleman who now came among us, and who were named Mr. and Mrs. Grice, were exceptions to this. Showily dressed, and loud in their conversation, they made great efforts to mix with ease in our company, and forsome inscrutable reason seemed to make special endeavors to become intimate with our own party; Mr. Grice attacking my uncle, and his wife devoting herself to us.

We were at no pains to conceal our aversion to their ill mannered and offensive intrusion, but they seemed determined to accept no rebuff. Lily said that we had met here the most pleasant and most unpleasant persons whom we had ever seen in our travels. The former class, I presume, mainly embraced Mr. Gregory.

Ever since Mr. Smith's visit on the previous day my uncle seemed to be unusually worried and anxious. Something had happened at the office, it appeared, which caused him great uneasiness, and he kept a constant watch for the post. Lily and I were troubled about it, but were hardly prepared for his sudden announcement at lunch the next day, upon receiving a letter from town, that we must pack up at once and return by the first morning train.

We had no objection to escape from the Grices, but in spite of Mr. Gregory's ill-repute for his mysterious arts, we were very sorry to leave him, to say nothing of the abrupt and unexpected termination of our holiday.

The Grices were sitting next to us when my uncle made this announcement, and I saw a peculiar look of significance pass between them. Mr. Gregory was sitting at the other end of a long dining table, and quite out of earshot, but he came up immediately after we rose from the table, and said:

"A very sad thing, this sudden departure of yours."

"Mr. Gregory," I replied, "you are perhaps aware that you are under grave suspicions of being in league with the powers of darkness, and this is another proof. How could you possibly know?"

"Oh, ill news travels fast," he said, laughing. "But it is a very hot afternoon, what do you say to a little reading?"

Lily here squeezed my arm vigorously, but I answered: "I fear my uncle will not let us go out of his sight. He feels it his duty to keep especial guard over us while we are in such dangerous company."

"Never mind," he said, "I will read to him as well."

We are now in the corner of the drawing-room, near a window looking out on to a covered balcony which overlooked the garden. My uncle came up and returned Mr. Gregory's courteous greeting in a manner which was, I fear, not very gracious.

"May I trouble you for the paper after you, sir?" he said.

"Certainly," was the answer. "But may we not all enjoy it together? With your permission I will read aloud to the company."

My uncle looked considerably astonished at this unusual proposal. Lily looked up with open eyes and curious expression, this being not exactly the kind of reading she had intended. But the offer was seriously made and repeated, and my uncle, who dearly liked being read to, gave a dubious consent.

Miss Lily, with filial affection, made him particularly comfortable in an arm chair, and Mr. Gregory commenced reading a long prosy article on French politics. He read with anything but his usual spirit, and in a soft, low, monotonous voice. The consequence was—as had possibly been not wholly unforseen—that my uncle was soon enjoying his accustomed afternoon siesta. The reading, having become gradually slower and softer, now ceased, and the reader, looking up, suggested by a slight gesture an adjournment to the garden.

Lily and I tried to smother our laughter and looked shocked, but we adopted the suggestion. A book of poetry was quickly produced, and I found that there is a difference between hearing French politics read in a stuffy drawing room to a middle aged gentleman, and hearing "Enoch Arden" read in a cool, shady alcove, to a pretty, dark-eyed, lovable maiden, with tender bosom having in sympathy with poor Enoch's sorrows, especially when the reader is a handsome young bachelor, with an exquisitely modulated voice, able to do full justice to the harmonious numbers of the Laureate.

At the end of a half an hour I was startled by an exclamation from Lily. Looking up I saw in the garden below, sitting on a seat under the trees, with their faces toward us, our dear friends, Mr. and Mrs. Grice.

The gentleman was keeping up, apparently, a desultory conversation with his wife. They waved their hands on catching our eye, and beckoned to us to come and join them, which we did not do.

Mr. Gregory, instead of going on with his reading, continued to regard them intently, and asked us whether we knew them.

We said, "No."

"But they seem to know you," he said.

We explained how they had favored us with their attentions. To our disappointment he could not be induced to go on with his reading, but he continued to stare at the couple before us; and when at last they strolled off in different directions, he said that he must apologize for having an engagement, and he left us abruptly. "A strange young man, indeed!" we thought, and we were still more surprised when in about an hour he returned and asked my uncle to be allowed a short private conversation with him. My uncle seemed startled at this request (and so, by the way, did Lily), but after a short pause he led the way into an adjoining apartment.

The conversation which ensued, as we subsequently learned, was as follows:

"I am about, sir," said Mr. Gregory, "to refer to your private affairs to an extent which will surprise you, but I hope to be able to render you a service which will be an ample excuse for my intrusion. You are, I believe, returning to town to-morrow?"

"Yes."

"The cause of your return is, I believe, connected with the forgery of a certain check in your name."

"Sir, how can you possibly know that?"

"That check was brought to you for your inspection three days ago by one of the clerks from the bank, a Mr. Smith, and it is now in your possession."

My uncle was speechless.

"Hear me further. The accuracy of my statements hitherto may claim credence for what I am about to affirm. Unless I am greatly mistaken, there are now in this establishment two persons who have been employed to regain possession at all costs of that forged paper. They suspect that you have it, and already your room and your daughter and your niece's room have been searched, and it only remains to search your person."

My uncle turned pale.

"It is known that you are leaving to-morrow morning, and the attempt will be made between now and then. Will you allow me to offer you my advice?"

I will not attempt to describe my respected uncle's condition of body and mind at this part of the interview, suffice it to say that the proffered advice was ultimately adopted.

On that evening my uncle declined to accompany us when, an hour after dinner, the house emptied on to the promenade. Mr. Gregory also was missing, and had not appeared at dinner. The Rev. Mr. Briggs took us under his care. My uncle was already nodding in his chair as he went out. Twenty minutes afterward two of the company softly re entered the room. This I had from an eye-witness. Their names were Mr. and Mrs. Grice. Mrs. Grice stood at the door, and her husband advanced gently across the floor to where my uncle lay back in his chair, snoring audibly, his handkerchief over his head, his coat thrown open, and a pocketbook just showing in his breast pocket.

Mr. Grice crept up to him, abstracted the book with a practiced hand, put it into his own pocket, and turned to go Now, as he recrossed the room he had to pass before a large lounge, with long hangings in front, and as he was, perhaps, somewhat surprised to find his ankles seized in the firm grip of a pair of hands thrust out suddenly from under the lounge. As he fell his amiable partner turned round—into the arms of a detective officer. At the same moment Mr. Gregory entered through the window from the balcony.

"This is your pocketbook, sir," said one of the detectives.

"Thank you," said my uncle. "It has nothing in it, but I am glad to have it back again."

Mr. and Mrs. Grice were removed at once to another public establishment in the neighborhood, where the company was very select, the hours regular, and the maintenance very cheap—a style of establishment which it was subsequently proved they had frequented in more than one part of the country.

Amid considerable excitement we promenaded late that night. My uncle said:

"You have rendered me a service, sir, which lays me under the deepest obligation to you. I have no doubt that the original delinquents, of whom these creatures are only the tools, will be brought to justice. Finding that we were on their track, they have made this effort to destroy the proof of their guilt, and prevent us from submitting it to experts. Thanks to you, they have failed. I can only say how welcome will be any opportunity of making any return to you, however slight."

"I shall certainly take you at your word, sir," was the answer.

"And now, Mr. Gregory," continued my uncle, "will you pardon our curiosity if we beg you to tell us the means by which you were able to divine the intentions of our departed friends?"

"Oh, Mr. Gregory," cried Lily, "you must tell us. We are on thorns to know, and will do anything in the world you like to mention if you will tell us."

"On those terms I consent," said he, with a curious look at Lily, which made her suddenly blush very much, as I could see even in the moonlight.

"You may have noticed," began Mr. Gregory, "that I am somewhat deaf, and I have been much more so. In consequence of this I have acquired the art, which I believe almost any one can acquire, of reading the movements of the lips in the same way that the deaf and dumb are taught to do, so that I can always understand what people say if only they are within seeing distance; and my seeing is very acute. I need hardly say that I avoid overseeing conversation, if you will allow me the expression, as much as I would overhearing it; but I freqtently see people speak a few words on accidentally glancing at them. I think that what has puzzled you will now be plain.

"Perhaps I ought to confess that I have yielded a little to the temptation of mystifying the company during the last week, especially in the case of Mr. Briggs, who has, like many people who have lived a good deal alone, a habit of talking to himself as he goes along, which he is scarcely aware of. This afternoon, however, I watched the Grices in good earnest. I was very much astonished at what I saw. Your sudden departure had disarranged their plans, and they had a full discussion of past and future operations. It was not at all a bad idea to hold their deliberations before your very eyes, so as to keep up their watch on your movements and disarm suspicion, but they had taken no precautions against being overseen. The rest you know."

"But how about your purchase of the hair wash, that sad proof of occult art?" I said.

"Oh, that has nothing to do with it. I was in the shop, being shaved, and I saw the transaction in a looking glass."

Later still, when my uncle had gone in, I heard him quietly say: "So you will do whatever I like to mention?" But these words were not addressed to me, and I judged it best to fall into the rear, and having no gifts of clairvoyance myself, I cannot tell you the rest of the conversation. I can only add that our return was postponed, and that shortly after these events Mr. Gregory again requested a private conversation with my uncle; that he had again some revelations to make concerning a conspiracy of two, male and female in this case also; and shortly after the first pair of conspirators had been "sentenced for life" by one of Her Majesty's Judges, a similar sentence was pronounced upon the other pair by the Rev. Mr. Briggs.

The Way it is Done.

A landlord from the interior, when asked what he did with a certain theatrical company which went to pieces in his town, replied:

"Receipted their bills and paid a teamster 12 shillings to haul 'em to the depot."

He figured up that he was at least $400 out of pocket in the last five years by the theatrical bilk, and he is only one out of a hundred in the State. There is in Detroit to-day an actor and manager who can figure up that he owes the hotel keepesr of Michigan over $2,000, and this amount will be added to each year as long as he lives. The fact that he owes the only hall, hotel and newspaper in a town does not make him avoid it. He knows what will follow, and he braces himself to meet it. The landlord recognizes him, begins to frown, but the manager rushes at him with, "Hello! old fellow—glad to see you—how's things—come to square up that old debt—best rooms in the house—hurry up supper—dead sure thing on three full houses and a clean hundred dollars profit."

The hope that he may collect the old bill puts the landlord in good nature, and he makes the troupe at home. Then the manager lights a five cent cigar, puts another into his pocket and hurries over to see the owner of the hall. The owner has a frigid welcome, but the manager pumps his arm, forces him to accept a cigar, and cheerfully continues:

"Was going to send that money by postal order, but forgot your first name. I've struck it rich now. Tell you what, but I've got the boss play this time. Crowded houses everywhere—greatest enthusiasm—standing room only—hardly time to count the money. Can I have your hall three nights this week?"

"Y-e s."

"All right—all right. Don't worry a bit, for we'll go out of this town on special train. Tra la for an hour."

Then he goes to the newspaper office. He rushes up stairs, bursts into the office, grabs the editorial hand and calls out:

"Howdy, old man—howdy? Hang it but you never looked better in your life! How's the Gazette—how's everything? By the way, did you know that the New York Herald, Chicago Times and London Standard were copying every thing you wrote? Fact, boy, and I congratulate you. I want some programmes, half sheets and dodgers, and we'll settle the two bills at once."

The editor has no hope of collecting the old bill without permitting the managers to make a new one, and so he rushes out the work. The troupe play three nights, take in about $20, and the manager has the same story his three creditors:

"Farmers too busy with their work—awful weather—not advertised enough—leading lady down sick—folks must get home somehow—send it to you next week—lah da-dah."—Detroit Free Press.

THE COLUMBIAN.

G. E. ELWELL, J. K. BITTENBENDER, } Editors.

BLOOMSBURG, PA.

—FRIDAY, JUNE 2nd, 1882.—

General Hancock is the guest of Judge Black at York this week.

The Supreme court is now in session at Harrisburg.

The Wilkes Barre Record has removed the Cameron ticket from the head of its editorial columns and comes out squarely for the independents.

The Republican sneers at the "dear" people. No wonder! It is the "dear" people that have risen up in their wrath and propose to drive from office the whole Cameron clan, and to put an end to one man despotism.

Congress has been in session over four months and only four out of fourteen regular appropriation bills have been passed. As the Republicans have a majority they must take the responsibility of this slow legislation.

It is likely that the Harrisburg convention will reassemble to nominate a candidate for Congressman at-large in place of Thomas H. Marshall, declined. John Wanamaker of Philadelphia is spoken of as the probable nominee.

The dead-lock in the House has been broken by the arbitrary ruling of Speaker Kiefer in refusing to entertain dilatory motions pending action to change the rules of the House. One of these days this ruling will come home to roost.

After learning what a storm his threat to turn free trader has brought upon him, Don Cameron now denies the language with which he is credited, and undertakes to explain what he did say. When Cameron has the toothache again he should be careful not to let the ears of the ass flop out from under the lion's skin.

The Republican members of the House at Washington in 1879, when the Democrats had a majority, did just what the Democratic minority is doing now. They filibustered. Then it was all right, but now it is revolutionary and treasonable, according to their way of thinking. It makes a difference whose ox is gored.

The Khedive of Egypt has made an unconditional surrender to Aribi Bey and the army, and although he still remains on the throne, the minister of war is virtually the ruler of Egypt. This is the state of affairs at present and so it will probably remain, until the foreign powers use sufficient force to change it.

Don Cameron is now threatening that unless the business men stand by him in his present fight, he will take them down with him. He says that if they want to stab him he is ready to receive the blow, and will then oppose a tariff as heartily as he has favored it. After he is stripped of his power, his opposition to a tariff will not hurt it much.

The steamer Celtic, with four survivors of the Jeannette expedition, Lieutenant Danenhower, Dr. Newcomb, Charles Fon Sing and Jacob Cole arrived at New York on Sunday morning. Lieutenant Danenhower has nearly lost his eyesight, and Jacob Cole has lost his mind, both the result of the terrible sufferings they underwent in the Arctic regions.

Already the republican campaign committee of Congress, has levied its assessments on office holders for funds to carry on the campaign. Even the page boys are taxed ten dollars each, and the scrub women who keep the floors of the public buildings clean are made to pay assessments. The republican party year after year, declares in favor of civil service reform, and then puts in practice a system that it condemns in its platform. How much longer will the American people submit to the supremacy of a party that so constantly ignores the principles that it professes to be governed by?

To bolster up his declining dynasty Don Cameron proposes to repeat the "business men's" campaign trick of 1880, and threatens that unless the one man rule is continued in this State that he will oppose a tariff. In other words he has favored protection, not as a principle, but in order to retain the support of Republicans. Now he thinks to frighten the business men of that party into submission by the same means that were used in 1880. It is doubtful whether the game will work a second time. The simple fact is that Cameron is badly scared, and his emper is getting away from him.

Ex-governor Curtin, speaks the following words of wisdom which should be heeded by the party throughout the State:

"As for the Democrats of Pennsylvania they ought to understaad that Senator Cameron now bases his only hope of success upon their own blunders. Nothing else can save him. But the Democrats will make no blunders. They will move on independent of the quarrels among their opponents, nominate a straight, clean Democratic ticket and poll a full Democratic vote. That is the best they can do. Anything like coalition is suicide. It is nonsense. It can't be done. And if it could it ought not to be done."

The Reading Times, Cameron Republican, has the following:

"There is much curiosity in Pennsylvania now to see who the Democrats will nominate for Governor. The Philadelphia delegation is reported to be nearly solid for Pattison, while in the Western part of the State Hopkins has picked up a number of delegates. The contest will become more earnest from the present time until the Convention meets."

That is all true, and it shows that no boss dominates the Democrats. They choose their candidates in convention, no back parlor arrangement for them.

There has been no "curiosity" whatever about who the Stalwarts would nominate, since Cameron gave the command in favor of Beaver—nor was there any from the date of the order till the meeting of the convention, everybody knew who it would be—the brass medal 306 being round his neck. And now to carry the Beaver ticket Cameron comes to Philadelphia, threatens and bull-dozes the business men and may again frighten John Welsh to raise a corruption fund; and as Dorsey will not be tried till after election, he may be sent into Pennsylvania to corrupt the election.

When the Democracy of this county adopts the methods of the republicans in the election of delegates to state conventions we shall certainly condemn its practices. It is true that our delegates are selected by the county committee, but there the likeness ends. Our delegates to the county convention are chosen by the people, their's are self appointed; our members of standing committee are elected by the people, their's are appointed by delegates self-appointed. Our party sends different men to the state convention each year, and men who are named by no boss. They send the same Cameron Machine henchmen year after year, notwithstanding the protest of many republicans. There is the distinction with a difference.

THE ISSUE.

The Independent Republicans have made a ticket which while equally as good, if not better, than that made by Cameron at Harrisburg, no more merits the support of Democrats than any other Republican ticket. When the name of Judge Ludlow, a Democrat, and one of the ablest and purest judges of the State, was suggested in the convention, as a candidate for Supreme Judge, it was met with howls, and cries of "No Democrat on this ticket." While it was admitted that he is honest and able and that the bench should be non partisan, the proposition to put him on the ticket was kicked out of the convention.

This action is a notification to the Democracy that the Independents prefer to stand on their own bottom, and instead of nominating a Reform ticket that might be supported by all people who desire reform, they have seen fit to nominate a Republican ticket, and have published to the State that they desire only Republican support. In the face of this, if there is a Democrat so foolish as to waste his ballot by voting for the Independent ticket, as many did last fall by voting for Wolfe, he should be promptly read out of the party. There is but one course left for the Democracy to pursue, and that is to nominate a straight-out ticket of the best men the party contains, and then make a strong fight for their election. The only issue between the two Republican factions is whether it shall be Boss Cameron or Boss Mitchell. The issue for the Democracy is to turn out both factions and establish once more a State government that is based neither upon Bossism, the spoils system nor repudiation. These, three are the only remaining principles of Republicanism, and so long as men call themselves Republicans they must support these principles. To repudiate them is to become Democrats.

Cameron is mad, Mitchell and Wolfe are determined and say they would rather defeat the Republican party, than to longer submit to personal rule in politics There is no probability of any compromise, and therefore Democratic success is almost certain. Nothing but the most inexcusable blunders can possibly defeat us. If such blunders are made, somebody should be held responsible.

THE INDEPENDENT PLATFORM.

As it is unlikely that the Cameron Republican organ of this county will publish the platform adopted at the Philadelphia convention last week, we print it for the information of Republicans who want to read all the news.

THE PLATFORM.

The Republicans of Pennsylvania who will not surrender their political rights and who maintain the exercise of their own conscience and judgment concerning public affairs, having assembled in State Convention make the following declaration of principle and purpose:

First—We declare our attachment to the principles of the Republican party—freedom, union, nationality, equal rights before the law, maintainance of the public faith, protection to home industry—and we demand that the record which has been made shall be wisely and fearlessly perpetuated.

Second—We declare that the nomination and election of J. A. Garfield to the Presidency signified to us the triumph of a true reform in the Civil Service and of an enlarged liberty of action for the masses of the Republican party in the nomination of their candidates and in the conduct of their party affairs, and we deplore the overwhelming evidence presented to us in Pennsylvania that the calamity of this assassination has been followed by the overthrow of of these reforms in the hands of his successor.

Third—We denounce the system which makes "patronage" and "spoils" out of public offices; we denounce the practice of giving them to political managers for use in advancing personal political ends; we denounce the removal of faithful and competent officers in the absence of a public reason; we denounce the practice of levying assessments and demanding contributions for party use from public officials; we denounce severally and collectively the evils of corruption which accompany the conduct of the Government as a "spoils system" and which are unecparable from such a method of administration, and we denounce the system of "boss rule" and "maceine control!" which when they tamely endured, makes leaders into autocrats and reduces the mass of the citizens into political bondage.

Fourth—We declare our purpose to take up the work which fell when Garfield fell. We demand, in place of the "spoils system," the reformation of the Cevil Service by law, so that the appointed places therein may be fully open to all fit and meritorious citizens, and removals shall be only for good and sufficient public cause. We demand, instead of the prostitution of the public service to private uses, its recognition as a high and honorable trust, to be administered for the people's benefit, with efficiency, economy and integrity. We demand, instead of the insolence, the proscription and tyranny of "bossism" and "machine rule," the free and conscientious exercise of private judgment in political affairs and the faithful discharge by those who assume representive trusts of the expressed will of the people.

Fifth—We declare in favor of the following party reforms:

1. That delegates to State Conventions shall be chosen by the people in the manner in which candidates for the General Assembly are nominated.

2. The representation in the State Convention shall be by counties, and shall be appointed according to their Republican vote.

3. State Conventions shall not be held without at least sixty days' notice, or earlier than the second Wednesday of July, except in Presidential years.

4. That the Republicans who voted for the Republican candidate for President at the Presidential election next preceding shall be entitled to join in the choice of delegates to the State and National Conventions.

The House Dead-Lock.

The matter over which the house of representatives at Washington is locked in parliamentary dispute is one which affects the right of representation in the highest legislative body known to our form of government. It involves the very principle which underlies self-government. The democrats of the house in exhausting every parliamentary privilege to compel the majority to investigate the matter properly and fairly are therefore but simply doing their duty, not merely to their party but to the whole people.

The proposition of the democrats of the house that the South Carolina election case be referred back to the committee on elections with instructions to investigate the charge of forgery in the testimony, was certainly fair and just. The refusal of the republicans to accept that the proposition proves that they are afraid of a proper investigation and their determination to sacrifice the public business to their purpose of displacing a democrat by so disreputable a member as carpet bagger Mackey shows a haste and recklessness which would hardly be manifested if their cause were just.

There has been no investigation of the alleged forgery of the testimony in this Mackey-Dibble case as alleged by the republicans. Mr. Mackey procured some ex-parte affidavits in rebuttal of the affidavits produced by Mr. Dibble. But the charge of forgery does not rest on affidavits. It was proved in the federal court in South Carolina during the recent trial of election officers that forged testimony was submitted by Mr. Mackey to the committee on election. That proof, given before the federal Judge Bond, under cross-examination, could not be presented to the committee on elections for want of time, and is not a part of the case as it now stands before the house. The democrats declare that without that proof and other testimony of a similar character which they are now able to produce, there can be no fair or intelligent determination of the case. Hence they refuse to proceed to a consideration of the matter in the house. The democrats are clearly and incontrovertibly right in this business and it is to be hoped that they will stick to the text no matter what journalistic saddlers and time servers may advise them to do. —Patriot.

The Coroner of Lycoming County Criticised.

Dr. George C. Saeger is the coroner of Lycoming county and resides in Montoursville. Some time ago he held an inquest on the body of an old man named Danner, whom he had a few days previously attended in his professional capacity as a physican. Dr. Saeger discharged the man Danner, whose daughter sat up with him the night he died, leaving him for a few hours to obtain rest, and finding him dead in bed. The coroner professes to have been in doubt whether an inquest was necessary, and says that he only consented to proceed in the matter at the urgent instance of several citizens who assured him that it was his duty so to do. Such being the case, he says, the inquest was held and it was decided that the deceased came to his death by "rheumatism of the heart." It now appears that the coroner is to be taken to task in the matter, and there is no doubt but that he was overzealous in his action of holding the inquest, since, to the minds of a great many people there was no evidence to warrant any suspicion of violence on the part of anybody, and surely the man's daughter had nothing to do with his death. The old man was sick and his taking off was the natural outcome of his sickness; and the only shadow of excuse for holding an inquest was the fact that nobody saw him breathe his last. Coroner Saeger has been freely criticised in the matter. The Philadelphia Times remarks editorially in the case and a Pittsburg paper calls him "The Meanest Man Yet," stating that he lives in Lycoming county, is a coroner, and swore himself as a witness on an inquest held by himself, and charging the county for registering his own oath.

General Beaver's Political Record.

As to his political record, we say with regret that General Beaver has not shown anywhere that he is a man of earnest convictions as would cause him to act with courage and independence. He came to the Harrisburg convention of 1878, looking for Senator Cameron's favor as a candidate for the Governorship, but was then set aside. In 1880, he served faithfully the conspiracy to force General Grant's renomination, and misrepresented his district, his State, and the whole of the North, by voting, from beginning to end at Chicago, in behalf of a third term. In 1881, when Mr. Oliver withdrew, he was selected, at the secret caucus of members of the Legislature held in Senator Cameron's house at Harrisburg, as the "machine" candidate for United States Senator, but failed to be accepted by the Republican members, both on account of the manner in which he had been "slated" and his previous record. In the present case, he receives his nomination at Senator Cameron's hands, and understands the fact and the obligation contained in it perfectly.—American.

Preserving Furs in Summer.

This is easily done when properly attended to. A lady informs us that her furs are never attacked by moth, which is their great enemy. She simply dusts over them liberally powdered camphor and borax, and then ties them up tightly in several strong wrappers of papers, so as to prevent all access by the insect. If pasted up or placed in a bag and sewed up will of course answer completely; but all that is necessary, after the application of the camphor and borax, is to see that the moths are completely shut out.

The senior young lady is a teacher in a village Sunday school, and is said to be exceedingly devout and dignified. Their mother, who is a rigid Presbyterian, is greatly opposed to the project.

The last lecture of the season was delivered in the Opera House on Friday evening May 26th by Col. J. A. Price of Scranton. His subject was "Napoleon at Moscow" and the discourse was a very interesting one. The Col. has a pleasant voice and good delivery. The attendance was not large.

A cave has been discovered near Dalton, Lackawanna county, which has excited the curiosity of the neighborhood. The entrance was concealed by a bush, which, upon being removed, disclosed a well walled avenue with stone steps decending several feet. At the bottom was a room eight feet by twelve, in which was a cot, bench, and other rude furniture.

Rev. Stuart Mitchell has very generously contributed five dollars to the Lecture committee towards making up the deficiency. If the lecture course had been patronized as it should have been there would be no deficit. There are certainly enough people in Bloomsburg, of culture and education to make a lecture course a grand success, if they would only encourage it.

A short distance from Buena Vista, Cal., is a cave inhabited by spiders of enormous size. The cave was discovered last December by a party of sight-seekers. The spiders are about the size of small birds and make a strange sound while weaving their web. The webs are so tough and the fibres so large that it is almost impossible to break them. We believe this lie is fresh this year.—Boston Post.

The first locomotive, the Stourbridge Lion, ever run upon a railroad in America, was in Honesdale, August 8, 1826, under the management of Horatio Allen. The controversy between the Philadelphia & Reading and the North & West Branch R. It will not be taken to the Supreme Court.

There is no larger or finer stock of clothing to be found outside of the cities than that displayed at David Lowenberg's. Under the supervision of Louis Lowenberg the goods are kept in the most perfect order, and though there is tier after tier of coats, vests, pants, &c. not one garment is out of place. They present the appearance of having been arranged with a plumb line. Lowenberg is doing an immense trade and selling very cheap.

The Wyoming Valley House at Wilkes Barre caught fire on Tuesday about noon, and the upper stories were destroyed before the flames were arrested. The lower floor was much damaged by water and smoke. At one time a general conflagration was feared, and assistance was telegraphed for to Scranton and Pittston. The report came here that the city was burning up, and a dispatch was sent to the mayor by the President of the Winona Fire Company offering their services if needed, to which a reply was sent saying that the fire was out. The loss on the hotel and furniture is about $40,000 fully insured. It will take about five months to repair damages.

The Senatorial conferees of the Twenty-fourth district met at the City Hotel, Danville, last Friday to choose a senatorial delegate to the Democratic State Convention. The following gentlemen were present: M. J. Phillips, W. McCarty of Sullivan; Dr. J. D. Mausteller, J. M. Millard of Montour; F. S. Hunt, R. D. Darlington of Columbia; W. J. Buckalew of this county, representing J. F. Frederick of Lycoming, and John Stack of the latter county. George W. Miles of Montour and James Deegan of Sullivan were named as senatorial delegates. After a number of ballots Miles was withdrawn, and Deegan was elected with Miles as alternate.

Last Sunday was Whit Sunday. It commemorates the descent of the Holy Ghost upon the apostles immediately after the Ascension. It derives its name from the Saxon word Witte, or wisdom, which the Holy Spirit imparted. It is also called Pentecost, a Jewish term for the feast which fell fifty days after Easter. The origin of the latter—Pentecost—is well known. It is designed to commemorate the delivery of the law on Mount Sinai fifty days after the departure of the children of Israel from the land of Egypt. The meaning of the word Pentecost is fiftieth. Our festival of Whitsuntide is somewhat movable in its character—sometimes occurring in May and at times in June, but always seven weeks after Easter. It is an important day in the Christian Church, and is usually marked with ceremonies and exercises of an interesting and solemn character.

State Teachers Association.

John A. M. Passmore, chairman of the State Teachers' Association, which meets in Pottsville July 5th, writes as follows: The committee on reception and entertainment are desirous of seeing that all who come to this meeting of the Association are properly provided for and hence they write requesting that as early as possible teachers give an estimate of the number they think will be present. The rates at the hotels will be from $1.25 to $1.75 per day.

Arrangements have been made to have a pleasant and cheap excursion so as to give all who are not familiar with the subject an opportunity to see how anthracite coal is mined and prepared for market. Urge your teachers to come out in full force, as this promises to be the largest meeting of the Association since its organization. Let us have every county largely represented.

All kinds of paper, pencils, pens, ink and envelopes at the COLUMBIAN store.

We take the following communication concerning the late Morris Van Buskirk, from a Williamsport paper.

Our community was greatly surprised to hear of the death of the gentleman whose name heads this brief notice. For the gratification of his friends I deem it a duty to subjoin a brief sketch of my old class-mate at the old school house on the hill at Milton, presided over by David Kirkpatrick, D. D. He was the eldest son of Thomas Van Buskirk, one of the most respected and courteous citizens of Milton, a man of unflinching honesty and sterling intergrity. The mother of Morris was a sister of Hon. Alexander Jordan, being the President Judge of this judicial district who was so well and favorably known to the citizens of Lycoming county. The deceased was a native of Milton, Northumberland county. After leaving his native town he resided for upwards of thirty years in Bloomsburg, Columbia county, and has left many friends who will recall the kindness and generosity of his disposition and many other kindred qualities, which will not soon be effaced from their memories. About nine years ago he changed his residence to this city, and during the pastorate of Rev. Geo. F. Cain attached himself to the First Presbyterian church, of which, to the end of his life, he remained a faithful and consistent member. He was of a most retiring disposition, and at church and at social meeting his seat was seldom vacant, and he evinced the reality of his unfaltering confidence in his Saviour by assuring his family of his entire submission to the will of his precious Saviour and dear Redeemer.

Decoration Day.

No steps having been taken by any other organization towards making arrangements for the proper observance of this day the Soldiers' and Sailors' club met at the Court House on Saturday evening for that purpose, and a programme was prepared. On Tuesday afternoon at 2 o'clock the procession formed on Market street in the following order:

Bloomsburg Cornet Band,
Soldiers and Sailors,
Normal School Literary Societies,
Friendship Fire Company No. 1,
Rescue Hook & Ladder Company No 2,
Winona Fire Company No 3.

The line of march was up Main street to the Normal school, countermarch down Main to Market, up Market and Rock to the Cemetery. After decorating the graves of the Soldiers, the band played a dirge, Rev. O. H. Strunk made a prayer, and Rev. F. P. Manhart delivered an appropriate address. There was a large attendance of citizens, and considering the impromptu manner in which the exercises were gotten up it was very creditable. C. P. Sloan was Chief Marshal assitsted by Messrs. Sanders and Young of the Normal.

Mifflin Items.

Mr. and Mrs. Samuel, Dora and Edward Snyder have for the past few days been visiting their friends and relatives at Milton.

Pitching quoits seems to be all the rage in town at the present.

The horse disease known as "Pink eye," appears as though it would visit us in turn with the rest.

Our little township now contains six flourishing Sunday schools and another at West Mifflin is strongly talked of.

Messrs. C. C. and A. B. Heller of Hazleton, paid a flying visit to their former home on Sunday.

The roads are being worked at present by the Supervisors. They are sadly in need of it as the recent rains have made them in a bad condition, beside many dangerous bridges.

The grain at present is looking unusually well, especially wheat bids fair for an abundant crop.

J. E. Creasy will commence butchering soon. It is a good idea, as Mifflin needs a butcher.

Mrs. A. Hoffman of West Mifflin is quite ill of Bilious fever.

Daisy, a two year old girl of Stephen Smoyer's died on Tuesday morning of brain fever.

Wm. Hefner moved from Beaver township to this some few days ago.

Chas. Steely has moved in his new house which makes a fine appearance.

Decoration day was observed by decorating the soldiers graves, in the presence of the G. A. R. of Berwick and Berwick band. Quite a number of persons were in town. PINAFORE.

[Monroe, (Mich.) Commercial.]

Mr. Clarence B. Stoddard, the druggist, informed us that M. Louis Hope, a sufferer with rheumatism for a number of years, obtained the greatest relief by the use of St. Jacobs Oil.

From Stillwater.

As the author of the "Stillwater Items" has apparently became so devoted to the piscatorial art himself as to entirely ignore his duties as a newspaper reporter, we, unwilling that the public generally should be deprived of an account of the sayings and doings of this second Sleepy Hollow, have taken upon ourselves the arduous task of chroniclers.

We do not exactly agree with our honored predecessor, in thinking that a railroad is all that is wanted to complete the felicity of the inhabitants of this place. We would offer our modest suggestion, that the small, weather-beaten hut answering for a school house be removed and a building reflecting more credit on the native energy and talent, be erected. The situation is very pleasant but we are sorry to notice that the pretty lane leading from the school grounds along the creek is being fenced in. It has always been a favorite resort for the romantic young people of our vicinity and the transforming of it into a corn field or turnip patch will meet with their highest disapproval.

Some thieves, evidently impelled by hunger, have been making nocturnal calls at the cellar of Frank Wolfe and Isaiah Raber and carrying off flour and all sorts of eatables. The same parties likely entered M. McHenry & Bro's. store on the night of the 23rd of May and secured a goodly supply of sugar, coffee &c. The good housewife now carefully locks the door of the larder and puts the key under the pillow.

We heartily congratulate Bro. Kinter on the number of postage stamps he has received. We have already noticed that an increased number of fish have been captured by amateur fishermen, the credit of which we are inclined to give to the instructions pertaining to the bait given by our worthy friend.

The Democrats of this place are very highly pleased with the nomination of C. R. Buckalew for Congressman. A better choice could not have been made.

The Lecture Course.

The Bloomsburg Lecture Committee desire to return thanks to the people of Bloomsburg and vicinity, for the support and encouragement given the lecture enterprise during the past season.

Especially do they feel grateful to Mr. Tubbs of the Exchange Hotel, who entertained the speakers in royal style, and who declined rendering a bill; to the newspapers of the town for their liberality and encouragement; and to those who, as holders of season tickets, manifested an interest in the literary advancement of the community by taking a lively part with the committee.

The committee are of opinion that in giving a full course of five lectures with the array of talent which has been furnished—"Eli Perkins," Col. Sanford, Dr. Tiffany, Hon. Daniel Dougherty, and Col. Price—they have furnished the community a choice literary treat, and in closing the course, they have no regrets for having undertaken the enterprise, but contemplate continuing the work next year and until it becomes established and self supporting.

Condemning none for the opposition forced upon us, and thanking all who have manifested any interest in our behalf we retire from the field for the season.

IMPROVING POOR FARMS.—The best thing for a man to do when he finds himself with a poor farm on his hands is, oftentimes, to leave it and locate on a better one. It can often be done at no more cost than the improving of the other would come to. But if it is decided to improve the poor one, about the first thing to look to is the drainage. Where a farmer is unable to make covered drains, either on account of its cost or for want of the required fall, he should have open ditches in order to get rid of all the surface water. The next point of importance is to have your plowing well done and the land brought to a fine tilth, keeping it perfectly clear of vegetable growth except that which is sown or planted; putting in more crop than you are able to cultivate well; get your land in clover as soon as possible, and when you have succeeded in this apply from thirty to fifty bushels of quicklime to the acre. Should your land be too poor to produce clover, try peas, buckwheat or oats, which, as soon as in blossom, should be plowed under for the purpose of supplying the soil with vegetable matter. Endeavor to convert all coarse material, such as straw, fodder, rough hay (and anything else that will absord the liquids from the stable), into manure, and supply directly from the stable in order to make the most of it. When once in grass keep a sod upon it as long as possible, and pasture no more than absolutely neccessary. Depend upon clover, plaster, lime and stable manure for increasing the fertility of your soil, and if you are unable to get a sufficient quantity of these, purchase the best commercial fertilizers in the market.—Tribune & Farmer.

DOSING SICK ANIMALS.—The practice of continually dosing animals with physics cannot be too much condemned. It is too often the case that when an animal is sick, on the advice of some friend, off runs the owner to the store for some medicine, the properties of which he is entirely unacquainted with. When we see a farmer frequently visiting the drug stores for medicine for his stock, the impression is that there is something radically wrong in his management. He is the "sick one," and needs the aid of a good physican—some one to show him that sickness rarely happens on a well ordered farm; that clean, warm stables and plenty of good feed, pure water in abundance, etc., are far better than their opposites, with all the physic that the largest drug store can supply. Nothing is more clearly proved than the importance of care and keeping of the right sort for the health of farm animals and their profitable growth and increase. We are glad to believe that the practice of dosing continually is on the decline. It is much better to prevent disease, and oftener is easier than the curing. If one has to dose, let him know precisely what he does it for, what the ailment is, and whether the physic is useful as a remedy for it.

THE RED ASTRACHAN APPLE.—One of the earliest and most reliable apples in Pennsylvania is the Red Astrachan, and its good qualities are well recognized in many other States. It was first imported into England with the White Astrichan, from Sweden, in 1816. Of good size, extraordinary beauty and having the singular bloom of the plum, it forms one of our handsomest dessert fruits. The quality is fair, but if left upon the tree too long it becomes dry and mealy. It is a rapid grower, universally hardy, an early and abundant bearer; and these good qualities alone make it a general favorite and no farm or garden should be without one or more trees. As we have several times said, it is one of the few sorts which may be relied on to give a crop of apples every year. We would not like to be without the Red Astrachan.

Forcing Rhubarb.

Outside of places where there are professional gardeners, the forcing of vegetables is very little known in this country. People in general are content with "things in their season," and do not trouble themselves to force or retard. Perhaps the easiest vegetable to force is rhubarb, and by taking a little trouble, material for pies and sauce my be had some weeks in advance of the supply from the open ground. The things needed are clumps of rhubarb roots, soil, and a dark, warm place. The roots should be dug before the ground freezes. As fine rhubarb as we ever saw was forced in a barrel or cask; the roots, packed in a layer of soil and surrounded by it, the cask covered tight, and set near the furnace in the cellar. A box to hold the roots, and set in a cupboard or closet in the kitchen will answer; or a box or barrel may be placed in the kitchen. Keep moderately warm, and see that the roots are sufficiently moist. A few roots will give an astonishingly abundant supply, much more tender and crisp and violently sour than the out door crop.—American Agriculturist.

It is announced that the Russian government is taking extraordinary measures to surpass and prevent lawlessness in the southern part of the country; but whether this effort has any reference to the persecution of the Jews which is being carried on in that region with terriable violence is not stated. There is every reason why the Czar's Ministers should exert themselves to put a stop to outrages which shock the sense of Christiandom and disgrace the Russian people; but it must be confessed that they, so far as their actions testify, regard the situation with an equanimity which it is not very easy to understand.

Missouri has a new law forbidding the manufacture or sale in that State of any imitation of butter, no matter whether represented to be genuine or not. The oleomargarine interest made a desperate fight in a test case, carrying it to the Court of Appeals, on the question of the law's validity. The decision is that the prohibitory act is constitutional. A statute prohibiting the manufacture and sale of an article of food made in imitation of a wholesome article in common use," says the Court, "which imitated article is so repugnant to the tastes and prejudices of our people that they will not eat it when advised of its real character, but only when cheated into the belief that it is the genuine article, in resemblance of which it is made, is a statute fairly within the police power of the State, not opposed to any provision of the Constitution of the State or of the Constitution of the United States, and the wisdom of which is not to be called into question in the judicial courts; and this is so, although particular samples of such imitated articles may, in the opinion of scientific men, be as wholesome and beneficial an article of food as the original substance in imitation of which it is made." The effect of this decision will be to close several factories in St. Louis, where the sale of imitation butter, made from beef fat, lard, and other materials, has been extensive.

Girls Sold at Auction.

WRAPPED IN SHEETS AND HANDED OVER TO THE HIGHEST BIDDERS AMONG THE BOYS.

Up at Clear Lake, Minnesota, the churches became tired of the old stereotyped plans of raising money and a new scheme was evolved from the inner consciousness of some bright genius. The treasury of the Congregationalist Church became rather bare and so the young folks got together and determined to fill it even to overflow. After a long discussion it was decided to bring about the desired end by putting all the girls of the church up at auction to be disposed of to the highest bidder.

The time came around, and, every young man in that part of Iowa in or near Clear Lake who had any money or could possibly borrow any was promptly on hand, eager to bid to the fullest extent. But there were some of the girls on whom it would have been impossible to obtain the bid of an old-fashioned copper cent, while there were others for whom the love-sick swains would willingly have bid their last dollar, and, in the spirit of Artemus Ward, the last dollar of any of their relatives. So to give all the boys an equal chance, the girls were wrapped up in sheets, so as to be completely unrecognizable. Each young man was positive that beneath the snowy folds of the sheet he could discern the outline of the girl on whom he doted, and when from fifteen to twenty of the young fellows singled out one particular sheeted object on which to stake their fortunes, excitement ran high and money ran out of pocket-books like water down a slanting roof.

After all the fair ones were disposed of the order was given to "haul up the sheets," and then ensued an indescribable scene of mingled happiness and disappointment. Maidens who had been purchased for a mere song, owing to a lack of bidders, turned out to be the best-looking girls in the town, while beings whose sylphlike appearance under a sheet excited the greatest admiration and drew hard-earned money from unwilling pocket-books were found to be most common-place creatures indeed. But all made the best of it and the disappointed ones bore themselves bravely.

A CONGRESSIONAL INCIDENT.—Congressmen Belford, of Colorado, has a very thin voice, almost inaudible across the House, and a nine-year-old son with an enterprising Western spirit. One day Mr. Belford tried in vain to make the speaker hear him in order to offer a little bill. Little San bore the situation as long as he could with composure, then darting forward to the area in front of the speaker's desk, his figure undersized for his age, but lithe as a grasshopper in full view before the speaker, and he called out amid the dim: General Keifer! General Keifer! don't you see my papa's got a paper he wants you to look at?' The speaker was amused at the boy's reminder, and promptly "saw" the member from Colorado, who was permitted to offer his measure. The little scene amused the House, however little suited to the dignity of the place.
